When history appears before our eyes: the reporters of the Third Reich.

1945, Berlin. During WWII, over 700 soldiers fueled the Reich’s propaganda machine. These "Propaganda Kompanien" generally used two official cameras. And yet, some got their hands on a third clandestine device. This was the case of Lieutenant Frentz, who was tasked with following the Führer himself. In the destroyed capital and in preparation for the Nuremberg Trials, a frantic race against the clock begins to recuperate these images. Illustrated by Denis Rodier, author of La Bombe, sold in 18 languages and over 150,000 copies in France!
