A broken family. A mother going through a rough patch. Marina has always been loyal. But should she keep quiet about her mother's secret?

Marina, 13, and her little brother Vania have just moved with their mother to a new city for a new life. Their parents recently separated and nothing is as it used to be. When Marina discovers that her mother has been fired and is struggling to cope, she decides to do everything she can to ensure that no one notices, out of fear that they'll be separated. But can Marina really keep up appearances both at school and with her father? Who will be the one to break through the wall of silence she has built around herself?
