A powerful, shrewd, and moving take on trans identity.

The gripping monologue of a young transgender teenager who defies society's norms, challenging notions of masculinity and femininity as she undergoes a compelling transformation. Born a boy, Sara has known she was a girl since early childhood: before she could understand it, even put it into words. She's grown up trapped by her body, by the rules of masculinity, unable to so much as look at herself in the mirror. Is she a mistake? An anomaly? Something has to change, her body needs realignment. When she turns sixteen, Sara begins her transition to become her true self, so she can feel alive.
