This wine lover's dream was not only to visit vineyards and taste vintages, but to learn how to make wine herself.

A mother of two, recently separated from her partner, decides to change her life. With help from a few friends, she leaves her safe Parisian life, buys some land in Larzac, and founds her vineyard, Les Gentillères. In these valleys, working the land, she feels fulfilled as never before. But hers is a physically taxing profession. Winemakers are alone in the harshness of an agrarian world. Nature is cruel. This is no job, but a calling. In this story of transformation, Laure Gasparotto writes her own story. To change your life is to learn lessons and break new ground at every turn. And in the end, to be someone... different. A moving account of a contemporary return to nature.
