Martin

I don't like it!

Martin and his family help young readers and their parents solve everyday problems that crop up as our society changes.

Like any child growing up in the 2020s, Martin wonders about things both big and little that impact his daily life. He's interested in everything around him and asks lots of questions!

Martin has decided that vegetables smell horrible and must taste that way too. He doesn't need to try any to know he doesn't like them! To top it all off, Martin find out his parents smuggle vegetables into his meals. How upsetting! Mom tries to explain that he might be pleasantly surprised if he just tried vegetables before writing them all off. To reassure him, and avoid any nasty surprises, Dad makes his son his kitchen assistant. Hey, wait--vegetables might be good after all!
