Young Paul Belin's scathing and hilarious conversion to vegetarianism.

Eight-year-old Paul Belin leads a quiet life with his family until one day, someone rings the doorbell. When he opens the door, he finds two hens have come to take him to... his own trial!

The boy is accused of having eaten, from early childhood onwards, an incalculable number of sausages, hamburgers, chicken wings... And who is in attendance? Hens, adorable chicks, goats, a very big cow, and many other animals. Will any of them take pity on Paul?

An absurdist tale about vegetarianism and its place in today's society, the guilt that some meat eaters feel, and the complicated relationship between humans and animals. With an even more hilarious twist ending (watch out for the carrots!).
