A poetic picture book for learning about colors and an invitation to change how we look at the world around us.

Dandine is happy in her meadow. The grass there is soft, green, and good to eat. When she watches the trains go by, she gets the urge to visit faraway places. Off she goes, with her friend Martin the color fisherman, to see the world. Their journey will teach them all about colors, new places, the joys of dreaming and being alive. Dandine travels the world delightedly before finally rediscovering the joys of home. After traveling the world, she realizes her favorite color is... green.
