Not so long ago, many things changed in Violette's life. Her parents used to kiss and have fun together... but that was before they split up.

These days, Violette has a polka dot suitcase so she can go to other houses: sometimes Dad's, sometimes Mom's. One thing will never change, though: her parents love her. This book ever so gently tells the story of a divorce as seen through the eyes of a little girl. A chance to focus on emotions and what children see and feel.
