A smart, funny parable of power, democracy and the individual's place in society.

One morning, panic breaks out in the chicken coop. All the hens—white, black, and red alike—are in a tizzy. One of them is missing! The fox is to blame—no doubt about it! The hens decide to raise an army and wage war against their predator. But getting organized proves far more complicated than expected... The roosters wonder which one of them should take the lead. But the hens are determined to make their voices heard as well!
