A book to prove that nature came up with superpowers thousands of years ago.

Invisibility. Dizzying speed. Night vision. Wingless flight. Immortality. Seductiveness... On the far side of the planet, outside your own front door, the breathtaking inventions of fauna and the flora are everywhere: flying squirrels, walking trees, creatures of the ocean depths, climbing ivy with its "superglue," incredibly swift peregrine falcons, insects that mimic their surroundings... Nearly 100 superpowers are presented in this striking showcase. Outstanding pictures accompany thoroughly researched text. The treasures of biodiversity are passionately explored by an author specializing in natural sciences.
