An unforgiving struggle against over-exploiting the land and the disappearance of bees.

Climate change makes its effects strongly felt in this equatorial region of Africa where few old-growth forests remain. Industrial agriculture has invaded all the available land, enlisting the latest technological innovations, even when it comes to pollinization. But when the daughter of an agroalimentary magnate buys a mysterious little yellow jar from a seductive Africactivist on the black market, a multinational's well-oiled gears come screeching to a halt. The resulting environmental disaster threatens several lives and livelihoods – all in real time on social networks.
