Arsenal's legendary coach opens up for the first time!

"A lifetime of trophies, titles, losses, encounters, betrayals, and loneliness. Men's lives lived according to the succession of games, weekend games, championships, the World Cup, driving the kids to practice sessions, a bedroom plastered with posters of famous players—football is the meeting between the most humble and the most pretentious.

It is a sport with a ball that can be played anywhere, even barefoot. It is a billion-euro industry that can make fortunes but also, like all businesses, is rife with corruption. It is insults but also a new kind of brotherhood. It is everything and its opposite, the best and the worst. It's my life. The past is synonymous with history, and history must be written."
