A love story at once universal and unique, of two lovers divided by death, that hits us right in the heart up until its shattering final twist.

Back from the cemetery where his wife was buried after a car accident, a grief-stricken New Yorker goes home and finds, to his great surprise, his beloved alive and well. In fact, she appears several more times, always vanishing as abruptly as she came. Between sessions with his shrink where he tries to untangle fantasy from reality, the mourning husband follows his beloved wife on psychedelic escapades through the Big Apple, where they relive the happiest moments of their life together, from their first date in Grand Central to sunset at Coney Island. Is she a ghost here to haunt him? Is he hallucinating? But why does all this feel so real? Where does reality end and dream begin?
