Three women. Three generations. Three love stories.

Daughter Justine, mother Catherine, and grandmother Liliane are together, which means stormclouds on the horizon. Liliane, usually so jovial, seems anxious and tired. Why is she so worried? Catherine runs a tight ship at home, but her mind is elsewhere, obsessed with a coworker. Dare she betray her husband and her principles? How will she ever be able to look anyone in the eye again—especially her dreaded mother? Justine isn't sure about anything anymore, especially whether she loves her man Benjamin. Will she ever get along with her oh-so-distant mother? And what's Grandma Liliane hiding, anyway? Justine will do anything to find out. What if all three women need each other to love, forgive, and move forward?
