Murdered retirees, a mystery killer, an investigation in a seemingly perfect world in which technology enables humans to be in two places at once.

In a world much like our own, technology enables humans to be in two places at once. On a paradisiacal private island, riche retirees are getting murdered when their haven should be impossible to breach. The first crack to show in an idyllic society where distance and borders have been abolished. Three policemen, a reporter, and a teacher are on the trail of a mysterious blond killer, a man with no identity in a globalized democracy where everyone's past, present, and future locations are known at all times. They must succeed before the new Babel is launched. Machinations, suspense, and science fiction: a thriller with a clear vision of the world.
