How do trees help each other, communicate, and interact? It all starts with a complex and amazing "green" network made by roots.

Have you ever wondered how trees help each other, communicate, and interact? A formidable vegetable "internet" of roots undergirds them. This book is two books in one: a "story" side that lays out the world of root systems for young readers, showing how they travel, play, and encounter other small living creatures, and a "learning" side that details where roots reach and what they do.
