How humans will survive the immense challenges of artificial intelligence, from one of the most visionary analysts of technological revolutions.

On the one hand, AI is progressing faster than anyone predicted. Every year the learning speed of AI multiplies by a factor of 100, whereas it takes 30 years to train a human engineer. On the other, we have an educational system that hasn't evolved in 250 years purportedly preparing our youth for careers that won't exist in the near future.

Laurent Alexandre is one of the most forward-thinking analysts of technological revolutions.
