A factual picture book in the guise of a fantastical adventure: a trio of kids experience their grandfather's backyard from an insect's point of view!

For Lucie, Timothy, and their cousin Rose, there's no better place in all the world than their grandfather's backyard when it comes to having adventures, solving new mysteries... and stuffing their faces with yummy fruit! Bombarded by their questions, their grandpa finally bursts out: "You wanna know what earthworms do all day? Why don't you go ask them yourself!" He snaps his fingers, and... POOF! The kids are reduced to the size of insects!

They'll have front-row seats for learning all the secrets of life in the backyard and about the biodiversity of an ecosystem so close to our own, while talking with earthworms, butterflies, bees, blackbirds, snails, ladybugs, and even spiders!
