For the 5th anniversary of #MeToo, Rose Lamy weaves together nine women's perspectives on this feminist revolution: its limits, stakes and prospects.

Be they journalists, activists, singers, students, philosophers, scientists, or writers, no matter their age or ethnicity, they each have a unique outlook on this recent feminist revolution.

Did it really all start in 2017? Was there a "wave" in France? Was it beneficial to all women? What do victims of gender violence want? Who are #MeToo's opponents? At a time when conservatism is on the rise once more throughout the world, threatening achievements no one thought had to be protected, when the default assumption is that victims are lying, these nine women each share their urgent, passionate, well-researched opinions, taking things... beyond the hashtag.
