What if the smallest of changes was all it took to see the world differently, change your behavior, and bring out the best you have to offer?

What if three one-hour sessions were enough to give students as much as two months of school? If a five-minute conversation could multiply donations for a good cause fourfold? If just a few questions helped patients restore meaning to their lives? This what the new science of change promises, a science as yet little-known to the wider public that paves the way for progress in such fields as education, healthcare, economics, and even the environment! With research well-backed by several practical case studies, the Kordas will give you the keys to change your life, and maybe even start to change the world.
