This unexpected, enriching approach often runs counter to conventional ideas of the business world.

Did you know that:

- Sadness makes you short-sighted and having fun increases your patience (Harvard and Columbia studies).
 - People who often feel guilty are great for companies (Carnegie Mellon University).
 - CEOs being fathers affects their employees' salary (Columbia Business School).
 - Over 35% of entrepreneurs in the US are dyslexic.
- For years, Annie Kahn has been compiling such factoids for Le Monde, and her famous column "Ma vie en boîte" (My life in a box) catalogs the work of psychosociologists on behavior in companies in order to optimize bonds between people.
