Europe is a wonderful playground for people looking for wide open spaces, breathtaking scenery, and authenticity.

The health crisis has changed our ideas about travel. Mass tourism has lost its appeal, and now less-inhabited places farther from towns and closer to nature have become popular. Touring Europe now also means being part of a sustainable approach to travel. No need to go to the far ends of the earth just to lose yourself!

Spain's Bardenas Reales desert, Malta's Dwejra Bay, Poland's Tatra National Park, Iceland's Látrabjard cliffs, and Austria's Bregenz forest are so many invitations to disconnect from the urban hustle and bustle.
