Clan wars are raging and nature is on its last legs in this inventive addictive eco-SF read that takes us to the far reaches of genetic manipulation.

Aqua. Her golden skin, shaved from head to toe. Her webbed hands for propelling herself through the water. Her god, Sol, and his nourishing rays. Her people, capable of photosynthesis. Her army, traveling in huge balloons. Her island, surrounded by toxic clouds. Her irradiated world, ravaged by old wars. Her abduction, by enemies seeking food. And at all costs, survival, to finally find out the truth and avoid extinction. After Antonio Da Silva's Azul (winner of the Millepages teen novel prize), this eco-science-fiction novel depicts a civilisation on the brink of collapse, whose only hope is to ally with its invaders. But are they really who we think they are?
