Sophie Rouvier puts her screenwriting talent to use, exploring how the break-up of a seemingly perfect couple impacts the people closest to them.

How can Chiara and Maxime announce their divorce when they've always been seen as the perfect couple? Just as they're about to break the news at last, they find themselves the guests of honor at a surprise party. Chiara and Maxime's friends and relatives have all pitched in to offer them a trip to New York, including certain outings to be captured on video for the benefit of everyone back home! Between this, their last trip together, and their home in Vincennes, Chiara and Maxime look back on the years gone by. The start of the journey? The first moment the two laid eyes upon each other as teens in La Rochelle... After all, this isn't just a story about a breakup, it's also a story about love.
