Ignoring her parents, Juliette follows her passion by working in Michelin-starred restaurant: an unforgettable summer of love and hardship.

Juliette has cooking in her blood. She wants to make a career of it, but her parents are firmly opposed. But she pursues her passion anyway, landing an internship in a restaurant... where she'll have to prove herself. Going from high school to a Michelin-starred restaurant is far from the dream she imagined: discipline, rigor, repetition, but also mockery and sometimes, sexist remarks. Her impulsive, explosive nature has a hard time in this quasi-military world. Between disappointments, unexpected support, love affairs, and happy friendships, could this be the best summer of Juliette's life?
