"And into the woods I go, to lose my mind and find my soul."

John Muir: the first modern environmentalist, to whom we owe the founding of America's National Parks. After the success of Into the Forest, Lomig returns to the setting he finds most inspiring: the North American wilderness. His stunning graphite pencil drawings faithfully capture the spectacular and wondrous details of biodiversity. Features a special appendix written by Muir archivist Mike Wurtz, including photos and documents.
