Giving In Doesn't Mean Giving Consent

A clinical and political approach to consent.

Beginning with the recent #MeToo movement and Vanessa Springora's memoir, Clotilde Leguil explores the subjective roots of consent. Drawing on psychoanalysis, she shows that desire is not the same as mere urge or impulse, and being faced with force or coercion leaves an indelible mark. Why do we so often fall into silence once this has happened? How can we give ourselves consent to speak once more?
