Fulfilling our human potential as a new horizon for our societies: an essential shift in awareness toward solidarity in an environmental revolution.

Drawing on a great variety of scientific research, basic teachings from sage traditions, and his own personal experience, Thomas Legrand explains how to organize our societies to encourage human fulfillment and the collective shift in awareness that our current challenges require.

A journey toward awakening our potential as humans in societies, Politics of Being lays out a path for truly human development in the 21st century, reconciling our hearts and minds, as well as the whole of our earthly community.

On the agenda: a vision of togetherness in the new world now emerging, and proposals for political action in many sectors—family and childhood, education, work and organization, health, food and agriculture, nature, justice, economics, governance—in order to bring it about, all founded on concrete examples already flourishing all over our planet.
