A deep dive into the plunder of the African seas, inspired by the missions against illegal fishing done by the writer, a First Mate on the Sea Shepherd line.

Seventeen thousand Chinese and European fishing boats are busy emptying the African seas for Western dinner tables. The crews of these vessels are exploited. Millions of people on the African continent depend on fishing. Several NGOs fight against the poachers.

This is a fictional document on unbridled consumerism, as lived and told by a First Mate on the Sea Shepherd line.
