"If the house's words scare me, it's because I don't understand what it's trying to tell me yet. But that will come."

Guerlain returns with his young son to the manor house where he lived as a child with his three sisters. Strangely, he doesn't have any memories from that time. While Guerlain experiences insomnia and rough nights, strange events also take place within the walls of this impressive abode. Are they benevolent, or harbingers of an imminent danger?
