A father and his son dream alongside birds, carried along by infinite freedom, exploring shooting stars and nests in the clouds.

A father and his son go on a hike in nature. They are amazed by the freedom of birds and start to dream, because although they don't have wings, they have their imagination. They can thus build a nest in the clouds, tickle the birds, paint with them in the sky, chase shooting stars and give them to one another... What about you? What will fill your dreams?
