A sensitive novel about mourning and continuing to live, in spite of it all.

When Noa dies, Chloé loses her footing. Noa was her friend-brother: radiant, incredibly irritating, and headstrong. He was her other half, and now she doesn't know how to go on. So when Noa appears to her, she doesn't ask any questions: who cares if he's a ghost or a hallucination. By his side, she learns to open up to others, and especially to Antoine, a paranormal buff, and Sandro, the apprentice actor with a fabulous nose. Step by step, she lives for two. But Noa won't always be there...
