A real-time dive into the meetings, parties, and illegal demonstrations of the world of nationalist youth angling passionately for power.

"We stand at the gates of power." ~ Jordan Bardella
The characters in this book are political activists and nationalist delegates. For more than a decade, they have organized meetings, events, and training sessions, arranged for places to socialize, and shared a common ideology. Among these radicals: Jordan Bardella, Sarah Knafo, Geoffroy Lejeune, Stanislas Rigault, Pierre Gentillet, even Pierre-Romain Thionnet. They all know each other and run in the same circles, bound by the same obsession: nationalism. Today, they are scattered among different political parties, associations, and media affiliations, but they maintain one intimate conviction: that someday, they will all work together.
