From her perch up in the sky, Gloria discovers an unsuspected world below, where differences could pose the greatest threat of all.

Gloria likes gazing down at the ground, far away from her home: a castle perched high up in the sky. But one day, she looks down and sees... a boy! She didn't know people were living down there. It's not safe from all the storms! But this boy has feathers. Those people down below don't look like her. And maybe that's the real problem! A powerful graphic novel about balancing technology and nature, fighting segregation, and adapting to climate change.
