Is this the end of a world?

The moment of post-reality is upon us. After attacks on truth buried under false information and the polarization of opinion, we are living at the dawn of a new era that will threaten the foundations of our shared existence. This era draws its strength from the widespread deregulation of desire and seeks to redefine our relationship with reality. Expressing a constant feature of the human species in a new and sudden form, this deregulation is being fueled by new ideological currents and the development of technology. Where will this lead us?
