All He Dreamt About Were Landscapes and Lions by the Sea

The Last Days of Ernest Hemingway

Author: Gérard de Cortanze

Publisher : Albin Michel

Category : Literature and Fiction

Genres : Novels/Fiction

Keywords : Hemingway - Cuba - Last moments

The last days in the life of an author who, until his dying breath, pondered the question of literary creation.

July, 1960: in Finca La Vigía, his haven near Havana, Hemingway is finding it more and more difficult to write. Finishing The Dangerous Summer was an ordeal; as for the book about Paris, A Moveable Feast, it no longer satisfies him. Depressed, suffering from fatigue, painfully thin and now impotent, he decides to make the journey to Madrid to see some corridas. Too ill, he is taken to his house in Idaho. He will never see Cuba again. A year later, on Sunday July 2, 1961, at 7am, he makes the last decision of his life.
