A beautiful duo that gently explores with your child the emotions felt before their birth.

A simple text that evokes motherhood and the long months a baby spends in their mother's belly, slowly beginning to catch the sounds of the house, the music from the street, to drum with their feet, to start thinking in their own way... and to feel all the love awaiting them in "the roundness of the world." Marie Poirier's gentle images beautifully cradle Carl Norac's tender words. Young children and their parents will love reading this book again and again...
