A playful essay about our relationship to new technologies, to artificial intelligence, and to God.

"Artificial intelligence will replace human beings": we hear this sentence so often, we eventually start to believe it. But what if, in reality, AI isn't replacing humans... but God? Gabrielle Halpern explores this bold idea with humor and precision, by comparing AI to the attributes of the divine: omniscience, omnipotence, omnipresence. Always available, personalized, and benevolent, isn't AI in the process of becoming the tailor-made God that humans have always dreamt of having at their beck and call? What kind of AI have we created, and what kind of humans is it shaping?
