Free of naivety and cynicism, this first-ever manual of humanitarian humanities provides NGO volunteers with theoretical tools for committed action.

This first-ever manual on the "humanitarian humanities" offers reflections on humanitarian action: from the history of humanitarian aid to the anthropology of global health and the sociology of mass violence, it provides an overview of the most relevant research for thinking in emergency situations. An introduction to the social sciences and humanities for those who help others save their own lives and dignity.
